This edition is extracted from the online project The Copenhagen Chansonnier and the 'Loire Valley' chansonniers, which consists of linked html-files and a great number of single PDF editions. It can be accessed at <http://chansonniers.pwch.dk/>.

Each html-file about a song contains lists of sources, and edition and translation of the poetic texts, discussion of the main sources and comments on text and music. Separate files hold lists of contents and descriptions of the sources. Other files contain papers and notes on related topics. The online edition offers many cross references and links to online facsimile editions. These links had to be simplified in the present edition.

Each version of a song is regarded as a valid performance by a scribe/musician, and therefore they are published separately. In most cases there will be no attempts to imagine the intentions of the composer or to reconstruct exactly what the composer had written when the music left his pen. Rather the aim is to interpret the written music in largely the same way as 15th century performers may have read it. Many details, which in one source are different from other sources, must be accepted by the editor as valid elements in a performance of the actual source. Sources marked by an asterisk * are included in the edition.

Appearance in the group of related chansonniers:

*Nivelle ff. 64v-65 »Ma plus mignonne de mon cuer« Dufay

*Wolfenbüttel ff. 55v-56 »La plus mignonne de mon cuer«

Text: Rondeau quatrain; full text in Nivelle and Wolfenbüttel, and in the anonymous setting in Dijon; also found in Berlin 78.B.17 f. 97v (no. 202), ed.: Löpelmann 1923, p. 156, London 380 f. 246, Jardin 1501 f. 67 (no. 59).

After Nivelle:

La plus mignonne de mon cuer, (1)
je m'ésbahis, dont ce me vient
que sans cesser il me souvient
de vostre beaulté et doulceur.

Des bonnes estez la meilleur,
puisque dire le vous convient,
la plus, mignonne de mon cuer
je m'ésbahis, dont ce me vient.

Quant j'ay desplaisir ou douleur (2)
aucune foiz, comme il advent, (3) je ne scay que cela devient pensant en vostre grant valleur.

La plus mignonne de mon cuer,
je m'ésbahis, dont ce me vient
que sans cesser il me souvient
de vostre beaulté et doulceur.

Most darling of my heart,
I am astonished at how it happens that without cease I am reminded of your beauty and sweetness.

Of the good you are the best,
since it is fitting to tell you so,
most darling of my heart,
I am astonished at how it happens.

When I feel grief or pain
sometimes, as it happens,
I do not know what this will turn into when I think of your great worth.

Most darling of my heart,
I am astonished at how it happens
that without cease I am reminded
of your beauty and sweetness.

1) Nivelle, line 1, "Ma plus ..."

2) Wolfenbüttel, line 9, "j'ay" is missing (error)

3) Wolfenbüttel, line 10, "... il seurvient"

In addition some differences in spelling.

The poem is also found in a different anonymous setting in the Copenhagen and Dijon chansonniers, also in the Italian MS Bologna Q16.¹

Evaluation of the sources:

The two sources for Du Fay's rondeau transmit different interpretations of how it should sound; and both sources seem to belong to traditions of transmission, which somewhere along the road have been corrupted to some degree. This may indicate that the chanson had been in circulation long before it reached the two scribes.

It is evident that the song's G tonality to some extent was coloured by fluctuations between B natural and B flat. The question is how much? The Wolfenbüttel scribe (or his exemplar) takes the easy way out and prescribes b-flat in both upper parts and a flat at the beginning of the lowest voice. The Nivelle scribe put a flat in the first staff of superius

1 At <http://chansonniers.pwch.dk/CH/CH022.html>.

2 where no Bs at all occur and in the first and fourth (the last) staff of the lowest voice. Taken at face value these flats do not impart any important meaning, maybe only that some tonal colouring is to be expected. It may be significant that in the rondeau's second section, where an e-flat is introduced and where the contrapuntal rules bring b-flats about in the upper voices' duet, the lowest voice carefully avoids touching on any Bs.

The uncertainty of the scribes is apparent. But both has produced performable, but quite different, versions of the song as regards hexachordal signatures. Differences in ligatures and details moreover cause differences in text underlay and phrasing.

The middle cadence (and the point of repeat for the two couplets) is only marked with fermatas in the upper voices in Nivelle. If these fermatas signify a prolongation of the cadence tones, the second section will start effortlessly in the rhythmical pattern already established, but a sure transition along with the lower voice will be difficult to accomplish. The Wolfenbüttel version probably was notated in the same way at some point in its genesis, but without fermatas, only a signum. A copyist along the road was not satisfied with its displacement of the strong beat and tried to repair the music by prolonging the static harmony in bars 8-9 and thereby bringing the second section in line. Later a better solution was probably brought in from another line of transmission, which clarified bars 17-18 with semibrevis rests – but the now superfluous prolongation of bars 8-9 was retained. In my transcriptions I propose to use the Wolfenbüttel interpretation of the middle cadence in both versions, and to ignore the prolongation of bars 8-9 in a performance of the Wolfenbüttel version.

In Nivelle, the two high voices are placed at the locations of superius and tenor on the opening ff. 55v-56, but they are not labelled, only the third voice, located as a contratenor, is labelled "Concordans". In Wolfenbüttel the voices are arranged in exactly the same way on the pages, but the voices on the right-hand page are mechanically labelled according to their location as "Tenor" and "Contra". Without doubt the labelling of the parts in Nivelle is the most authoritative of the two sources.²

Comments on text and music:

Du Fay has set the poem's worship of the beloved in artful, nearly équivoques rimes for two equal high voices and a "Concordans" (Nivelle, see above). The two-part structure of the equal voices is entirely self-sufficient and uses movement in parallel thirds (text line 1), unison canon (line 2), and free polyphony with the 2nd voice raising an octave above the first and exchange of the superius and tenor roles (lines 3-4). The Concordans (in accordance with whichever voice takes the tenor function) generally supports and colours this duet from below, but in the second section of the rondeau it lays between the upper voices and in fact for a moment (b. 28) is the highest sounding voice.

In this succinct setting of the rondeau quatrain the varied technique more than fulfils the demands for a viable rondeau setting. The contrast between the exuberant unison canon (bb. 6-15) and the much greater distance between the upper parts in the second section is accentuated by the introduction of the E-flat in bar 24, which for a time really moves the song into cantus mollis.

2 See also the comments in David Fallows, The Songs of Guillaume Dufay. Critical Commentary to the Revision of Corpus Mensurabilis Musicae, ser. 1, Vol. VI (Musicological studies & documents 47), Neuhausen-Stuttgart 1995, pp. 215-219.

All this works just as well in the Wolfenbüttel version, which has key signatures of one flat all through the song. But it cannot be denied that the greater contrast between an only slightly coloured cantus durus in the first section of the rondeau in Nivelle and the cantus mollis in the second is somewhat levelled out in the Wolfenbüttel version. For example the E-flat comes up earlier in Wolfenbüttel (b. 20) by virtue of the contrapuntal rules, and with less effect.

In comparison with the anonymous setting of the same poem in Copenhagen and Dijon Du Fay's is a masterpiece – even if it has become a bit tainted during transmission.

1) Superius 2 and Concordans both have a signature of one flat in their first staves indicating that some tonal coloring can be expected. However, the first staff (bb. 1-7) of Superius 2 does not contain any Bs at all, so it is probably an error; and in the Concordans bb. 1-10.1) the signature has been interpreted as written accidentals in bars 3-4. The b-flat in the signature also appears in the last staff of the Concordans (bb. 33 ff), where again no Bs occur.

2) Superius 1, bar 17.2, the semibrevis rest does not appear in the MS.

3) Superius 2, bar 18.1, the semibrevis rest does not appear in the MS.

4) Concordans, bar 17 is a brevis without punctus. – The fermata middle cadence has probably been corrupted during transmission; adjusted in accordance with the version in the Wolfenbüttel chansonnier.

1) Contra has a signature of one flat in its first staff (bb. 1-12.1) only. This signature has been retained for the whole piece, and the single b following the imitation bars 9-12 (in b. 14.1) has been treated as if it had a notated natural sign.

2) Superius, text 3, bar 2, the word "j'ay" is missing (error).

3) All parts, bar 9, the end of "je m'esbahis" has been extended by a semibrevis value (not in Nivelle), probably to repair a corruption of the musical text. In performance it would be best to ignore the extention by omitting the first semibrevis rest in the superius (b. 9.1) and the dots on the breves in the tenor and contra (T b. 9 and C b. 8).

1) Contra, bar 36.2, the c could be read as a B.
